LIFE HEALING CENTER ACHIEVES PRESTIGIOUS CARF
ACCREDITATION

(Santa Fe, NM – February 26, 2009) – Life Healing Center, an emotional trauma, mental health disorders and addiction treatment center, has announced the achievement of accreditation from the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF) for a period of three years.

“We are very proud to receive CARF accreditation,” said Cheryl Brown, Executive Director of Life Healing Center. “This achievement is the product of our dedicated staff and commitment to providing the highest quality treatment for our clients. We are pleased that the Commission has recognized our efforts.”

CARF is an independent, non-profit accrediting body that focuses on the promotion of quality, accountability, value and optimal outcomes in providing rehabilitation and human services.

The process for receiving CARF accreditation involves a rigorous consultative process and in-depth review of services by the internationally recognized organization and by those who utilize the services. Programs seeking CARF accreditation show a commitment to continually improving their care.

The official CARF website states: “[Clients] can have the highest possible confidence in programs and services that carry CARF accreditation... Accreditation is a good sign that an organization cares about delivering quality services to its customers... a ‘seal of quality’ that the organization’s services have been awarded because they have delivered positive results.”

Cradled in the Sangre de Cristo foothills above Santa Fe, New Mexico, Life Healing Center helps clients recover from emotional trauma, addictions and mental health disorders. The Center specializes in a comprehensive, individualized approach to recovery and emotional healing. Groups are intimate and primary therapists meet with clients at least twice a week. A celebrated Family Therapy Weekend program helps loved ones to understand and cope with the process of recovery.
